

CSL Training Partner: Jay Schindler

About Jay Schindler

Jay serves as the CEO of Miami Valley Leadership Foundation, which is part of the Leadership Foundations global network. Schindler works with a passionate team of dedicated men and women who are investing in the next generation of leaders. He is the founder of G2 Potential LLC, an executive and leadership coaching firm. Jay serves as an executive coach and works with clients in Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, as well as remotely. He is the former owner and CEO of Eskco Corporation. Schindler is a former senior consultant for Oliver Group and Leadership Pipeline Institute. Services included leadership development, assessment tools, and executive coaching.

Schindler is also a former market development executive with Teradata Corporation, a global leader in analytic data platforms, EDW cloud services, marketing and analytic applications, and related 'Big Data' consulting services. He led global account management and market development across the industrial manufacturing Midwest, including Whirlpool, Cummins, Goodyear, and GE. Jay Schindler says, "When I first heard John present his leadership materials, I knew it was a good philosophical fit. I wanted to partner with the Center for Serving Leadership."

Schindler earned his Bachelor's Degree from Taylor University, and his Master's in Business from Florida Metropolitan University. He earned his CPC credential from the Institute of Professional Excellence in Coaching (iPEC). He lives with his wife in Dayton, Ohio and enjoys his family of five children and three grandchildren. In his spare time, he partners with international workers to teach successful business principles in developing countries and enjoys sailboat racing and coastal cruising.